PAGE ORIENTATION

By default, all pages are oriented horizontally, so landscape. But you can change the orientation to vertical (portrait) by setting the `pageOrientation` property. Most browsers support portrait and vertical pages, but some older versions of Internet Explorer do not.

If you set `pageOrientation = 'vertical'`, the page will be rotated 90 degrees clockwise. If you set `pageOrientation = 'vertical-rl'`, it will be rotated 90 degrees counter-clockwise. This means that the page will be rotated 180 degrees if you set `pageOrientation = 'vertical-rl'` and the page is already rotated 90 degrees clockwise.

The `pageOrientation` property can be set on the `Page` object, or on the `Document` object. If you set it on the `Page` object, it will apply to that page only. If you set it on the `Document` object, it will apply to all pages.

For example, to rotate a single page, you would use:

$page->pageOrientation = 'vertical';

To rotate all pages, you would use:

$document->pageOrientation = 'vertical';

Note: Not all browsers support this. In particular, some older versions of Internet Explorer do not. However, most modern browsers do.

If you want to rotate a page 90 degrees counter-clockwise, you can use:

$page->pageOrientation = 'vertical-rl';

or

$document->pageOrientation = 'vertical-rl';

Note: If you use `'vertical-rl'`, the page will be rotated 180 degrees if it is already rotated 90 degrees clockwise.
